

BUCKINGHAM PALACE

Wedding Anniversary Messages

The King and The Queen send congratulatory messages for Diamond (60th), 65th and Platinum (70th) wedding anniversaries and every year thereafter. In order to receive a message, it is essential for you to provide this office with documentary proof of marriage or contact the appropriate records office for verification. It is possible to receive a belated message up to six months after the event. For residents in Australia, Canada and New Zealand you must apply directly to your Governor-General. For contact details please telephone the Anniversaries Office on 0207 930 4832.

How to apply for a message

Option 1) If you have a copy of the celebrants' marriage certificate, you may apply directly to the Anniversaries Office either by post or online. To make an online application please visit our website: www.royal.uk, go to the Anniversaries section and see 'Applying for an anniversary message'. Alternatively, complete the form overleaf and return it with a good photocopy of the celebrants' marriage certificate to the address below. You will receive acknowledgement of your application confirming that a message will be sent. Please do not return this form any sooner than five weeks before the celebration date.

Option 2) If you do not have a copy of the marriage certificate and do not wish to purchase one, an application can be made direct with the appropriate records office. If you choose this option do not return this form.

For those married in England or Wales, you may contact the General Register Office to make a telephone application. You will need to contact them around 6 weeks before the anniversary with the celebrants' names, address and the date and place of the marriage. They will verify the details and pass the information directly to the Anniversaries Office for processing.

Frequently Asked Questions

1. Which anniversaries/birthdays are congratulatory messages sent for?

The King and The Queen send messages of congratulations for Diamond (60th), 65th and Platinum (70th) wedding anniversaries and every year thereafter. Messages are also arranged for 100th, 105th birthdays and every year thereafter.

2. Can a message be sent after the anniversary/birthday has passed?

It is possible to receive a belated message up to six months after the event. Unfortunately, it is not possible to arrange a message for an event which took place more than six months previously. However, it may be possible to arrange a message for the anniversary/birthday the following year - an application should be made as usual, three weeks before the next anniversary/birthday.

3. How soon can I apply for a message?

The Anniversaries Office accepts online and postal applications for wedding and birthday messages no sooner than five weeks before the celebration. If applying with the General Register Office, you may apply from 6-8 weeks before the anniversary.

4. I am applying for an anniversary message and cannot supply a copy of the marriage certificate. Can I still apply without it?

If you cannot supply a copy of the marriage certificate, you must contact the appropriate General Register Office who can search for the marriage details and confirm them directly with the Anniversaries Office. Contact details can be found on the application form.

5. I am applying for a birthday message and cannot supply a copy of the birth certificate. Can I still apply without it?

If you cannot supply a copy of the birth certificate and the celebrant is in receipt of a state pension, you can send the completed form to the Anniversaries Office who will check the details with the Department for Work and Pensions.

6. The celebrant(s) has/have received a message before. Do I need to apply again?

In order for the Anniversaries Office to send a message it is necessary to receive an application. You can do this by completing an online application, or by posting the appropriate application form. If the celebrant(s) has/have received a message before it would not be required to provide documentary evidence on this occasion.

7. Can the message be sent to a different address?

This is a personal message from The King and The Queen and must be sent directly to the celebrant(s) at their home address and not presented. If the celebrant(s) will be away from home, the card may be sent to where they are staying only.

8. How is the message sent?

Messages are sent via Royal Mail two days before the event.

9. Can the message be sent to arrive before the anniversary/birthday?

It is possible to request a message be delivered up to a maximum of 5 days before the event.

10. The celebrant(s) live(s) overseas. Can I still apply for a message? (Excluding Australia, Canada and New Zealand)

The King and The Queen only send messages to people who are current citizens of Realms and UK Overseas Territories. It would therefore be necessary for you to supply the Anniversaries Office with proof of the celebrant(s) British Nationality (i.e. A photocopy of a current or recent British Passport).

11. The celebrant(s) live(s) in Australia, Canada, or New Zealand. What do I need to do?

It may be possible for residents of Australia, Canada or New Zealand to receive a message of congratulations from The King and The Queen. It is necessary for you to arrange this through Their Majesties' representative, the Governor-General. Please call the Anniversaries Office for contact details.

12. The celebrants now use a different surname to the one stated on the marriage certificate. Do I need to provide proof?

If the couple's surname has changed since their marriage, is it essential for you to provide proof of their name change. This can be in the form of a copy of the Deed Poll or copy of the London Gazette entry (www.london-gazette.co.uk). If no official documentation can be found to support the name change, a congratulatory message can still be arranged in the name as stated on the marriage certificate.

13. How much does it cost to arrange a congratulatory message?

No charge is made by Buckingham Palace to send a message of congratulations from The King and The Queen, however, there may be a fee when applying with the records office.

14. The certificate I have copied is too long for one sheet of A4 paper. Will it be accepted in two halves?

It is acceptable for the Anniversaries Office to receive the certificate copy in two halves or on A3 paper. However, please ensure you have copied the left hand side of the certificate stating the marriage/birth place and date along with the celebrant(s) name(s).

15. Is it possible to arrange an anniversary/birthday message to be sent posthumously?

It would not be appropriate to send a congratulatory message when a celebrant has passed away, applications will not be processed in these circumstances.

For any further queries not listed above, please call the office on 0207 930 4832.
